PES students and faculty are teaching and learning in new, innovative ways through the use of interactive platforms such as Google Classroom, Seesaw, and Zoom, just to name a few. Teachers have found unique ways to address various learning styles of their students by offering hard copies, instructional videos, virtual field trip experiences, online morning/afternoon meetings, daily Q&A sessions, and multiple assignment submission options (notes pages, videos, email, journal posts, pictures, etc.) based on each student's preference, ability, and resources. Many students have also initiated lunch group chats as a way to stay connected and engaged with their classmates.

PES students have gotten creative with setting up their at-home learning environments too and establishing daily schedules. PES is proud at how innovative and supportive our families have been in making this temporary transition as smooth as possible.
